COUNTY APPLES WIN THE PRIZES

Adams County Apples Win Two First Prizes and a Number of Other Premiums at Big State Show at Pittsburgh.

Adams County exhibits at the annual state fruit, livestock and dairy show at Pittsburgh have carried off several of the principal prizes and are attracting attention on all sides. A big supply of local apples for free distribution is being eagerly sought by those who attend the show and the fame of the local fruit is extending more than ever.

A telegram from Chester J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, secretary of the State Horticultural Association, states that Adams County fruit won the first and second prizes on box packages and a large number of minor prizes. The county is represented by a better display than ever before and local growers are also present to tell of the merits of local fruit.

Robert M. Eldon, of Aspers, the vice president of the state association, is presiding over the meetings in the absence of the president who is ill. Other Adams Countians attending the show are Charles Raffensperger, Charles Wolf, E. P. Garretson, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Keller and Mrs. Robert M. Eldon.

At the opening of the show a telegram from Governor Tener was read and a band played "Ha! the Chief." The show is being held in the Duquesne Garden under the auspices of the Keystone State Fair Association and at the opening three thousand persons faced zero weather to witness the exhibits. They went the evening eating apples, drinking milk and shivering.

More than anything else the exhibits demonstrate that no other state raises better livestock, that the apple trees in no other state bear better or more luscious fruit, that in no other state are dairymen more expert and sanitary, and that the soil on Pennsylvania's hills and in the valleys is unsurpassed.

Twenty cars of livestock and seven carloads of fruit are being shown.

The Myers cigar box factory in York, which was destroyed by fire on Sunday night, throwing 70 hands out of work and entailing a loss of nearly $100,000, will be rebuilt.

EIGHTEEN YEARS AGO

Eighteen years ago today, January 17, 1894, Henry Heist was hanged in the Adams County jail yard for the murder of Emanuel Munn near Cold Springs. The anniversary of the event was the subject for conversation at a number of places in town. Heist was buried in the County Home cemetery and a few days after his internment rumors were rife that the body had been stolen. Accordingly on Sunday, January 20, ex-Sheriff Fissel, then steward of the alms house, his son, George C. Fissel, and John Eicholtz opened the grave and casket and found nothing disturbed. On the simple marble slab which is placed at the head of his grave was carved the name and date of death of the man and underneath this inscription was carved the word "Hung." This has since been chiseled out—by whom it is not known.

RURAL CARRIERS HAVE TROUBLES

Many Carriers from the Local Post Office Have Trouble with Drifts, Upsets, Runaways and Other Misfortunes.

Gettysburg's rural mail carriers report hard struggles with the elements and snow drifts in their efforts to cover their routes on Tuesday and, of the local force, only a half dozen were able to get over their routes. Drifts five feet deep stopping some while accidents made others turn back.

Carrier Maurice McCullough, of route 3, got several miles out of the Emmitsburg road when he was confronted by big snow drifts. To get around these he turned in Sickles avenue where his horse fell. The carrier got his horse unhocked and took it to the barn of William L. Shields. He then returned to get his mail pack and when he went back again found the sleigh had been drifted in. With two horses of Mr. Shields it was finally got out after two hours' work.

Carrier Preston Tate, of route 8, had a similar experience when his horse fell. He managed to get the animal up and was then forced to lead it through drifts several feet deep for a mile until better roads were reached.

Carrier Harry Flemming, of route 6, was thrown out of his sleigh at Eline Hamilton's blacksmith shop, with his blankets and mail. The roads were practically impassable and when he returned found that conditions were worse than when he first upset.

Carrier Samuel Waltman, of route 13, was thrown out of his sleigh and the horse ran a mile before being caught. Fortunately Mr. Waltman was not hurt though he had a long and cold walk until he recovered the team.

Carrier Elmer Hutchison, route 5, was compelled to take down fences and drive through fields to get over his route and even then had to cover several extra miles in order to serve all his patrons.

Carrier George Grove, of route 4, had to lead his horse through drifts four or five feet deep and was finally compelled to turn around.

Carrier John Wills, of route 12, had been warned before starting that the roads could not be covered but he made an attempt to get over his route. At George Baker's blacksmith shop he had to turn back.

Carrier Charles Pfeiffer, route 1, Carrier Samuel Weikert, route 2, Carrier Norman Storrick, route 7, and Carrier John Eckert, route 9, had comparatively good roads and experienced little difficulty.

RURAL MAIL CARRIER ILL

W. B. Spahr, one of the rural delivery carriers of the Dillsburg postoffice, was overcome by an attack of heart trouble early Tuesday morning while resting in a chair in the office preparatory to starting over his route. Postmaster F. M. Altland noticed that the man was ill and summoned Dr. Crawford, who treated the sick man. All day Mr. Spahr was in an unconscious condition except for a few minutes when he was able to recognize his friends. In the evening about 6:30 o'clock, he received another attack, but later showed slight improvement. The physician states that the man is out of danger if he has no more attacks. Mr. Spahr is about 40 years old, and lives one and one half miles from Dillsburg, with his wife and one child.

PREPARING FOR ENCAMPMENTS

United States Regulars and Militia from Various States will again Hold Camps of Instruction during the Summer.

The system of having maneuver camps under the direction of Regular Army detachments, similar to the camp of instruction held at Gettysburg two years ago, is to be followed again this summer but as yet no sites for the camps have been chosen by the War Department. A different combination of states in this section has been made from that of 1910.

It will be recalled that among the troops here during the month of July 1910 were militia from Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia. For this coming summer Pennsylvania has not yet been announced for any division and it is possible that the division encampment, which will likely be held there, will be the only camp in which the Keystone militia will participate this summer. In 1910 one brigade, a battery of artillery and two troops of cavalry took their term of service with the maneuver camp and were not at the division encampment.

Under plans announced for this summer it is probable that the militia from Maryland and the District of Columbia will go into a camp of instruction under Regular Army officers. Their site is as yet undetermined. The militia from New Jersey will be with the New York militia and the militia from the New England states in the maneuvers about New York City. Virginia and West Virginia assignments are not known here.

Plans for the Maryland maneuvers are being worked out at the Army War College at Washington and are in charge of Brigadier General W. W. Wotherspoon who was in command at the Gettysburg Camp of Instruction two years ago.

Whether or not Gettysburg is again to come in for a share of the encampments is not known. The encampment here two years ago is said to have been conducted more economically than at other places and was a considerable saving to the government.

ANOTHER HANOVER FIRE

The co-oper establishment connected with the Penn Mill Company, Hanover, was destroyed by fire late Tuesday afternoon, entailing a loss of about $1200, on which there is $1,000 insurance. The fire was caused by an overheated stove. The establishment is operated by G. W. Everhart, of York.

There are half a dozen men employed in the establishment. Fire was discovered about 4:45 o'clock. An alarm was turned in, but before the companies arrived the building was a mass of flames, as it was filled with a large quantity of barrels and seasoned wood used in making them. The shop is separated from the flour mill by an air space the width of a switch, and it was only by hard fighting that the mill was not burned. Several houses nearby were also in danger but efficient work of the firemen saved them.

UP AGAINST IT

The proposition of entertaining the visitors to the national conference of the Church of the Brethren, to be held in York during the last week in next May and the first week in June is giving the members of the York Chamber of Commerce much concern, for they are anxious that every visitor be well taken care of. It is believed that probably 25,000 persons will be there for a week and there is a probability that 50,000 or 60,000 will be there over Saturday and Sunday during the conference. It will mean that the York fair ground will be dotted with tents and that York citizens will be called upon to entertain thousands in addition.

START SURVEY WORK

Engineers of the State Highway Department have started work on the surveys of the old southern road between Pittsburgh and Gettysburg in spite of the cold weather, and it is planned to push the work as rapidly as possible. The work has been divided between two corps of picked men, all of whom are eager to make a record. The data gathered will give the State authorities the first complete information about the lines of the old road and the engineering conditions to be met in its reconstruction.

CAUGHT GRAY FOX

Levi C. Epley caught a fine specimen of gray fox at Granite Hill in a trap he had set for skunks. The fox was caught by the foot and very slightly injured.

SAY COLD HURT THE PEACH CROP

Peaches Hurt, Say Growers, while Apples are Unharmed. Peach Tree Can Stand only Eighteen below Zero.

Peach growers fear that serious harm has been done to their crop of 1912 by the severe cold of the past ten days while those who grow apples extensively claim that their fruit, which is considerably more hardy, has not been damaged.

Some of the peach buds had been well advanced by the warm weather of the fall months and that these have been bitten is feared by many of the growers. Peach trees will not endure cold lower than 18 degrees below zero, according to orchardists, and as this record was substantially lowered heavy losses are anticipated. There were wide differences in temperature reported at various orchards and as a result some growers who inspect their trees will find greater damage done than others.

From the Franklin County peach belt come reports of great damage. William B. Dock, living north of Chambersburg, says that he will get only ten per cent of the usual crop. J. W. Newcomer, in the same section, reports one fourth of his trees affected. Severe damage is reported from orchards about Smithsburg and Chewsville.

Growers say that all the yearlings or trees planted last year are killed but the older trees, which are more hardy, will withstand the cold and only the coming season's crop will be affected.

SHOULD FEED QUAIL DURING COLD WEATHER

If the sportsmen and farmers of Pennsylvania want to see any quail next Summer they had better take steps to feed the birds in this bitter winter weather, said Dr. Joseph Kalb, secretary of the State Game Commission, in speaking about the effect of the unprecedented cold weather on "Bob White."

"The state had more quail in it last Fall than for years, largely due to the intelligent manner in which the sportsmen and farmers fed the birds. The state is trying through its agents to feed the birds, but its resources are limited and the people ought to help. This weather is terrible on all kinds of animal and bird life, but it means death, to many game birds who cannot get food and who die of starvation or cold. We have trained birds to stay near our homes and we ought to feed them."

Writing along this same line, Erasmus Wilson, of Pittsburgh in his much quoted circular, "Save Our Quail," says:

"Grain, screenings, ground feed, sunflower seed, chicken corn—any sort of grain, will make a feast for him. At this season of the year the same as you, he has a special liking for buckwheat. Can you blame him?"

"Every boy who knows where there is a covey of quail should regard it as a religious duty to see that the birds are fed every day. Such boys will be all the better men for doing this."

Numbers of partridges have been frozen in the fields during the last few cold days. In Franklin County the birds, weakened by cold and lack of food, were attacked by crows.

ABANDONED BY THIEF

The recovery of a team belonging to Isaac L. Hahn, Blue Ridge Summit, and stolen in Waynesboro, is due to Sheriff Snively, of Washington county, Md. Two young men hired the team from Mr. Hahn and drove to Waynesboro. They hitched it in front of a house while they made a call. Some one took the team and drove off with it. Mr. Hahn was notified and he sent messages throughout this section of the country. Sheriff Snively heard of a team answering the description passing through the tollgate on the Marsh pike and he went in search in that direction. He found the horse and sleigh in a vacant field near Reid and took it to Hagerstown. Mr. Hahn took the team home. Beside the sleigh there was a blanket valued at $5 and a robe valued at $6. These articles were in the sleigh when it was found.

A valuable whip was missing. There is no trace to the thieves but the officers are still on the hunt for them.

WITH CONCERT COMPANY

Josephine Gerwing, the beautiful and talented young violinist, who is one of the leading artists of the Metropolitan Concert Company which will appear at the Wizard Theatre on Thursday evening, although she is only 24 years old, has won extensive fame in Europe. She was a child prodigy who dazzled the great Joachim by her playing when but ten years of age. This famous master of the violin wrote the following of her in the Berliner National Zeitung:

During this winter there appeared here several really great prodigies, but Josephine Gerwing eclipses them all. This child is an artist, a divinely favored human being. One would hardly imagine that a child could master so much as she has, nor have the intellectual grasp, nor the emotional expression. Her execution is simply enormous. She is the most wonderful child I have ever met."

BOMB IS HURLED AT CHINESE PREMIER

Two Killed and Many Injured in Peking.

Peking, China, Jan. 17.—A bomb was thrown at Premier Yuan Shi Kai's carriage in this city.

Seventeen persons, civilians and soldiers, were wounded by pieces of the bomb and flying splinters. Eight or ten of these are expected to die.

The horses attached to the carriage of the premier and several of the military escort were killed.

The assassin's aim was bad and the infernal machine missed its mark, landing among his bodyguard. The bomb exploded with terrific force. A big hole was dug in the earth.

The assassins selected a moment when the premier was on his way from the imperial court, where he had a long audience with the princes of the imperial clan.

Yuan Shi Kai's carriage, with open windows, was preceded and followed by an escort of cavalry. The route was lined by soldiers and police stationed five yards apart, the men facing alternately inwards and outwards and carrying loaded rifles with fixed bayonets.

When the carriage arrived opposite the residence of Dr. Morrison, correspondent of the London Times, at the corner of which the assassins had been observed standing, the bomb was hurled. Without waiting to see the effect of their deed the perpetrators rushed toward a neighboring tea house. Soldiers and police, however, were close on their heels and they were arrested before they were able to effect their escape by a rear door. The public executioner was called immediately and with his assistants is standing sentinel in front of the house. He will remain on duty there until he receives orders from the imperial authorities, who, it is expected, will command that the men be beheaded immediately.

MINERS' CLAIMS IN CONVENTION

Need of Organization in Anthracite Regions.

SAYS MEN ARE INDIFFERENT

President White, in Opening Annual Convention, Points Out Conditions in Pennsylvania.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17.—Thirteen hundred delegates, representing 300,000 organized coal miners, attended the opening session of the twenty-third annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The convention will formulate the demands to be made by the miners to the mine owners for new wage contracts, to go into force April 1 next in both bituminous and anthracite fields.

The chief feature was the annual report of John P. White, the president who said in part:

"We are on the eve of the expiration of our contracts. I am most seriously impressed with the responsibility we assume.

"So far as I am concerned, and I think I voice the sentiments of the rank and file, it is my opinion that our policy should be such as to leave no doubt in the mind of anyone that there will be no reductions from existing wage contracts, and we should earnestly strive for such advancements as it is within the range of possibility to secure.

"While we will never surrender the right to strike, we should not lose sight of the fact that some of the greatest successes our organization has ever achieved lay in the channels of peace. When I speak of peace, I mean an ennobling peace, where the rights of our people are wholesomely respected."

Of the condition of the union in the anthracite field, largely in Pennsylvania, in the present crisis, Mr. White reported:

"The problem of organizing the anthracite mine workers and building up a strong organization in that field has been a matter of serious concern to our movement for many years. I discovered that there was very little organization in the anthracite fields and resolved to do what I could to revive the spirit of unionism in these districts.

"The small membership reported in the anthracite field indicates that the miners are indifferent to their surroundings and their failure to join the organization and support it is one of the great reasons why they have been unable to secure the conditions they are demanding. With the expiration of the award in the anthracite field on April 1 it is to be hoped that they will realize the condition that confronts them and join the organization, thus making success possible."

Secretary-treasurer Perry submitted his financial report. It showed that the organization had on hand at the beginning of the year and had collected in assessments a total of $2,383,547, and had expended to Dec. 1, 1911, $2,188,331, leaving a balance of $195,216. Of the expenditures $1,749,106 was paid out in support of strikes, that in district No. 26 alone costing the organization $170,899.

BUTTER MAY GO TO 60 CENTS

Chicago Dealers Expect "Trust" to Continue Price Increase.

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Sixty cents a pound for butter was said to be the price to which retail dealers in Chicago look forward.

Quotations have reached 47 cents, the highest in the city's market history. The advance is ascribed to an alleged trust, which has been under investigation by federal authorities.

Eastern houses that have been manipulating prices by means of large holdings of cold storage butter also are blamed.

STARVING OYSTERMEN WALKING TO SHORE

Many Apply at Jail For Food and Shelter.

Easton, Md., Jan. 17.—The Easton jail is filled with dredgers, many of them from Baltimore, Philadelphia and Wilmington, who have walked from their vessels, which were frozen up in the ice at Tilghman's Island, Oxford, Cambridge, McDaniel, Claiborne and other places on the Choptank, Tred Avon and Miles rivers and the Chesapeake bay.

Between twenty-five and thirty have arrived in Easton since Sunday night, and it is said a large number of others are walking on the public roads that lead from Tilghman and Oxford to Easton. They will be given lodging and food at the jail by Sheriff Haddaway.

The dredgers that are now in jail say that the present oyster season has been a good one, and report that up to a week ago there had been little suffering among them, but that since then their boats have been frozen up, and they could not work, and the owners of the boats refused to furnish them with food and fuel.

They were compelled to walk ashore on the ice, which was from ten to twelve inches thick, and procure wood to keep from freezing. They report that for the last few days their provisions have been running out and they were compelled to abandon their boats and tramp twelve to twenty miles to Easton to get shelter and food.

HITCHCOCK MAY RESIGN

Reported in Washington That Postmaster General Will Quit.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Here is the latest report that is going the rounds as a result of the clash between President Taft and Postmaster General Hitchcock over the latter's declaration for public ownership of the telegraph lines of the country:

Postmaster General Hitchcock will resign from the Taft cabinet before the Chicago convention. This prediction was made by White House callers who believe a breach has been created between the postmaster general and his chief which cannot be healed, and that if Hitchcock resigns he will be found among the insurgents when the time comes to nominate a Republican candidate for president.

In support of this prediction many facts are being marshalled. It is generally believed the postmaster general recommended government ownership of telegraph lines without consulting the president, with the certain knowledge that the president would repudiate it and with the deliberate intention of causing a breach.

The statement issued at the White House shows that President Taft had previously blue-penciled such a proposition.

RAPS HITCHCOCK FOR PAYMENTS

Spent $1,000,000 Illegally in Year, Denver Editor Says.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Postmaster General Hitchcock was charged with making an illegal expenditure of $1,000,000 at a hearing before the house committee on reform in the civil service.

The man who made the charge is Urban A. Walters, editor of the Denver Harpoon.

Editor Walters declared that the postmaster general and his assistant, Joseph Stewart, have "unlawfully and illegally paid to various railroad companies since March 12, 1910, $1,000,000 for services and facilities, specifically required by law, which services and facilities have never been furnished."

Continuing, Mr. Walters said: "I charge that the failure to supply such facilities—sanitary and safety appliances—have worked a great hardship on the men working in the railway mail service. The railway mail service employees also have been intimidated by official orders, posted on order books, and have been ordered to certify to the untruth that their facilities were being supplied."

The editor of the Harpoon further charges that the postal authorities have coerced many of the employees of the railway service into submitting false reports of the condition of their cars.

Representative Prouty, of Iowa, suggested that the charges made by Mr. Walters should be made the subject of a special inquiry.

John Shirley, president of the Illinois Steel Car Wheel company, gave testimony along the same lines.

INTERVENTION IN CUBA LOOMS UP

Gomez Warned Soldiers Must Keep Out of Politics.

THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS

State Department Gives Notice That Intervention Will Follow Further
Attempts to Nullify Law.

Washington, Jan. 17.—The United States threatened a third armed invasion in Cuba in a note presented to the government of that country by Arthur M. Beaupre, American minister at Havana.

Mr. Beaupre was acting on full telegraphic instructions sent him from the state department.

The last time the United States sent troops to Cuba was in October, 1906. It was recalled here that the belief was freely expressed at that time by both officials and members of congress that the next time American soldiers went to Cuba they would go there to stay. Since that date, however, confidence in the ability of the Cubans to manage their own affairs has greatly increased, and there is little expectation that actual intervention will be necessary.

The United States minister to Cuba, Mr. Beaupre, reported to the state department that, in defiance of a decree issued by President Gomez, forbidding officers of the army and the rural guard to participate in politics in Cuba, the soldiers had practically taken control of the Cuban elections. The situation, Minister Beaupre said, was regarded as most serious.

This situation is an outgrowth of the agitation begun last fall by the association of the veterans of the war for Cuban independence. The veterans began by demanding the dismissal from office of all men who had been identified with the old Spanish regime in 1895-98, and the appointment of members of their organization to office wherever possible.

The campaign has now so far progressed that officers of the army and the rural guards are being drawn into it contrary to existing law. The veterans in return are demanding that the law prohibiting the participation of army officers and the rurales in politics be made a dead letter and are defying the Gomez administration on the issue.

The state department's note, directed sent by President Taft, to the Cuban government, follows:

"The situation in Cuba, as now reported, causes grave concern to the government of the United States. 'That the laws intended to safeguard free republican government shall be enforced and not defied is obviously essential to the maintenance of law, order and stability indispensable to the status of the Republic of Cuba, in the continued well-being of which the United States has always evinced and cannot escape a vital interest.

"The president of the United States therefore looks to the president and government of Cuba to prevent a threatened situation which would compel the government of the United States, much against its desires, to consider what measure it must take in pursuance of the obligation of its relations to Cuba."

MOUSE STARTS PANIC

Women in Trolley Car Scream and Get on Back of Seats.

Reading, Pa., Jan. 17.—A mouse that escaped from a bag of oysters, which a passenger carried into a trolley car that runs from this place to Womelsdorf, caused a dozen women passengers to get on the back of the seats and scream lustily.

The oyster man began to jump and yell in a still louder tone, for the mouse hid in his trousers as a safe retreat.

When it got out of the trousers the mouse spied a girl, whose short skirts made it impossible to cover her ankles, and it made a dash for the black silk stockings.

The girl yelled, but none of the women had courage enough to get from their high seats. She finally induced the mouse to retreat and the conductor killed it.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Face of Letty Lane.
As Dan went through the halls of the Carlton on his way to his rooms that same evening, the porter gave him two notes, which Dan went down into the smoking-room to read. He tore open the note bearing the Hotel Savoy on the envelope, and read:

"Dear Boy: Will you come around to-night and see me about five o'clock? Don't let anything keep you." (Letty Lane had the habit of scratching out phrases to insert others, and there was something scratched out.) "I want to talk to you about something very important. Come sure. L. L."

Dan looked at the clock; it was after nine, and she would be at the Gaiety going on with her performance. The other note, which he opened more slowly, was from Ruggles, and it began in just the same way as the dancer's had begun:

"Dear Boy: I have been suddenly called back to the States. As I didn't know how to get at you, I couldn't. I had a cable that takes me right back. I get the Lusitania at Liverpool and you can send me a Marconi. Better make the first boat you can and come over. Joshua Ruggles."

Ruggles left no word of advice, and unconscious of this master stroke on the part of the old man, whose heart yearned for him as for his own son, Dan folded the note up and thought no more about Ruggles.

When an hour later he came out of the Carlton he was prepared for the life of the evening. He stopped at the telephone desk and sent a telegram to Ruggles on the Lusitania:

"Can't come yet awhile; am engaged to be married to the Duchess of Breakwater."

He wrote this out in full and the man at the Marconi "sat up" and smiled as he wrote. With Letty Lane's badly written note in his pocket, and wondering very much at her summons of him, Dan drove to the Gaiety, and at the end of the third act went back of the scenes. There were several people in her dressing-room. Higgins was leaning her back to a white bodice and Miss Lane, before her glass, was putting the rouge on her lips.

"Hello, you," she nodded to Dan. "I am awfully sorry not to have shown up at five. Just got your note. Just got in at the hotel; been out of town all day."

Dan saw that none of the people in the room was familiar to him, and that they were out of place in the pretty brocade nest. One of them was a Jew, a small man with a glass eye, whose fixed stare rested on Miss Lane. He had kept on his overcoat, and his derby hat hung on the back of his head.

"Give Mr. Cohen the box, Higgins," Miss Lane directed, and bending forward, brought her small face close to the glass, and her hands trembled as she handled the rouge stick.

Mr. Cohen in one hand held a string of pearls that fell through his fat fingers, as if eager to escape from them. Higgins obediently placed a small box in his hand.

"Take it and get out of here," she ordered Cohen. "Miss Lane has only got five minutes."

Cohen turned the stub of his cigar in his mouth unpleasantly without taking the trouble to remove it. "I'll take box," he said rapidly, "and when I get good and ready I'll get out of here, but not before."

"Now see here," Blair began, but Miss Lane, who had finished her task, motioned him to be quiet.

"Please go out, Mr. Blair," she said. "Please go out. Mr. Cohen is here on business and I really can't see anybody just now."

Behind the Jew Higgins looked up at Dan and he understood—but he didn't heed her warning; nothing would have induced him to leave Letty Lane like this.

"I'm not going, though, Miss Lane," he said frankly. "I've got an appointment with you and I'm going to stay."

As he did so the other people in the room took form for him: a blind beggar with a stick in his hand, and by his side a small child wrapped in a shawl. With relief Dan saw that Poniatowsky was absent from the party.

Cohen opened the box, took its contents out and held up the jewels.

"This," he said, indicating a string of pearls, is all right, Miss Lane, and the ear-drops. The rest is no good. I'll take or leave them, as you like."

She was plainly annoyed and excited, and, as Higgins tried to lace her, moved from her dressing-table to the sofa in a state of agitation.

"Take them or leave them, as you like," she said, "but give me the money and go."

The Jew took from his wallet a roll of bank notes and counted them.

"Six," he began, but she waved him back.

"Don't tell me how much it is. I don't want to know."

"Let the other lady count it," the Jew said. "I don't do business that way."

Dan, who had laid down his overcoat and hat on a chair, came quickly forward, his hands in his pockets, and standing in front of the Jew, he said again:

"Now you look here—"

Letty Lane threw the money down on the dressing-table. "Please," she cried to Dan, "let me have the pleasure of sending this man out of my room. You can, go, Cohen, and go in a hurry, too."

The Jew stuffed the pearls in his pocket and went by Dan hurriedly, as though he feared the young man intended to help him. But Dan stopped him:

"Before this deal goes through I want you to tell me why you are—"

Miss Lane broke in: "My gracious Heavens! Can't I even sell my jewels without being bossed? What business is it of yours, Mr. Blair? Let the man go, and go all or you—all of you. Higgins, send them out."

The blind man and the child stirred, too, at this outburst. The little girl wore a miserable hat, a wreck of a hat, in which shook a feather like a broken mast. The rest of her garments seemed made of the elements—of dirt and mud—mere flags of distress, and the odor of the poor filled the room; over the perfume and scent and smell of stage properties, this miserable smell of stage properties, this miserable smell held its own.

"Come, Daddy," whispered the child timidly, "come along."

"Oh, no, not you, not you," Letty Lane said.

Job Cohen crawled out with ten thousand pounds' worth of pearls in his pockets, and as soon as the door had closed the actress took up the roll of notes.

"Come here," she said to the child. "Now you can take your father to the home I told you of. It is nice and comfortable—they will treat his eyes there."

"Miss Lane—Miss Lane!" called the page boy.

"Never mind that," said the actress. "It is a long wait this act. I don't go on yet."

Higgins went to the door and opened it and stood a moment, then disappeared into the side scenes.

Letty Lane ruffled the pile of bank notes and without looking drew out two or three bills, putting them into the child's hands. "Don't you lose them; stuff them down; this will keep you and your father for a couple of years. Take care of it. You are quite rich now. Don't get robbed."

The child tremblingly folded the notes and hid them among her rage. The tears of happiness were streaming over her face. She said finally, finding no place to stow away her riches, "I expect I'd best put them in daddy's pocket."

And Dan came to her aid; taking the notes from her, he folded and put them inside the clothes of the old beggar.

"Miss Lane," said Higgins, who had come in, "it is time you went on."

"I'll see your friends out of the theater," Blair offered. And as he did so, for the first time she looked at him, and he saw the fever in her brilliant eyes.

"Thanks awfully," she accepted. "It is perfectly crazy to give them so much money at once. Will you look after it like a good boy and see something or other about them?"

He thought of her, however, and caught up a great soft shawl from the chair, wrapped it around her tenderly, and she flitted out, Higgins after her, leaving the rest of the money scattered on her dressing-table.

"Come along," said Blair kindly to the two who stood awaiting his orders with the docility of the poor, the obedience of those who have no right to plan or suggest until told to move on. "Come, I'll see you home." And he didn't leave them until he had taken them in a cab to their destination—until he had persuaded the girl to let him have the money, look after it for her, come to see her the next day and tell her what to do.

Then he went back to the theater and stood up in the rear, for the house was crowded, to hear Letty sing. It was souvenir night; there were post-cards and little coral caps with feathers as bonbonnières. They called her out before the curtain a dozen times, and each time Dan wanted to cry "Mercy" for her. He felt as though this little act had established a friendship between them; and his hands clenched as he thought of Poniatowsky, and he tried to recall that he was an engaged man. He had an idea that Letty Lane was looking for him through the performance. She finished in a storm of applause, and flowers were strewn upon her, and Dan found himself, in spite of his resolution, going back into the wings.

"How Does It Feel to Stand There and Hear Them Clap Like a Thunder Storm and Call Your Name?"

This time two or three cards were sent in. One by one he saw the visitors refused, and Dan, without any formality, himself knocked at Letty Lane's small door, which Higgins opened, looked back over her shoulder to give him a name to her mistress, and said to Dan confidently, "Wait, sir; just wait a bit." Her lips were affable. And in a few moments, to Dan's astonished delight, the actress herself appeared, a big scarf over her head and her body enveloped in her snowy cloak, and he understood with a leap of his heart that she had singled him out to take her home.

She went before him through the wings to the stage entrance, which he opened for her, and she passed out before him into the fog and the mist. For the first time Blair followed her through the crowd, which was a big one on this night. On the one side waited the poor, who wished her many blessings, and on the other side her admirers, whose thoughts were quite different. Something of this flashed through Dan's mind—and in that moment he touched the serious part of life for the first time.

In Letty Lane's motor, the small electric light lit over her head and the flower vase empty, he sat beside the fragrant human creature who London adored, and knew his place would have been envied by many a man.

"I took your friends to their place all right," he told her, "and I'm going to see them myself tomorrow. I advised the girl not to get married for her money. Say, this is awfully nice of you to let me take you home!"

She seemed small in her corner. "You were great tonight," Dan went on, "simply great! Wasn't the crowd crazy about you, though! How does it feel to stand there and hear them clap like a thunderstorm and call your name?"

She replied with effort. "It was a nice audience, wasn't it? Oh, I don't know how it feels. It is rather stimulating. How's the other boy?" she asked abruptly, and when Dan had asked that Ruggles had left him alone in London, she turned and laughed a little.

Dan asked her why she had sent for him today. "I'm mighty sorry I was out of town," he said warmly. "Just to think you should have wanted me to do something for you and I didn't turn up. You know I would be glad to do anything. What was it? Won't you tell me what it was?"

"The Jew did it for me."

And Dan exclaimed: "It made me simply sick to see that animal in your room. I would have kicked him out if I hadn't thought that it would make an unpleasant scene for you. We have passed the Savoy." He looked out of the window, and Letty Lane replied: "I told the driver to go to the Carlton first."

She was taking him home then! "Well, you've got to come in and have some supper with me in that case," he cried eagerly, and she told him that she had taken him home because she knew that Mr. Ruggles would approve.

"Not much you won't," he said, and put his hand on the speaking tube, but she stopped him.

"Don't give any orders in my motor, Mr. Blair. You sit still where you are."

"Do you think that I am such a simple youth that I—"

Letty Lane with a gesture of supreme ennui said to him impatiently: "Oh, I just think I am pretty nearly tired to death; don't bother me. I want my own way."

Her voice and her gesture, her beauty and her indifference, her sort of vague lack of interest in him and in everything, put the boy, full of life as he was, out of ease, but he ventured, after a second:

"Won't you please tell me what you wanted me to do this afternoon?"

"Why, I was hard up, that's all. I have used all my salary for two months and I couldn't pay my bill at the Savoy."

"Lord!" he said fervently, "why didn't you—"

"I did. Like a fool I sent for you the first thing, but I was awfully glad when five o'clock came you didn't turn up. Please don't bother or speak of it again."

And burning with curiosity as to what part Poniatowsky played in her life, Dan sat quiet, not venturing to put to her any more questions. She seemed so tired and so overcome by her own thoughts. When they had turned down toward the hotel, however, he decided that he must in honor tell her his news.

"Got some news to tell you," he exclaimed abruptly. "Want you to congratulate me. I'm engaged to be married to the Duchess of Breakwater. She happens to be a great admirer of your voice."

The actress turned sharply to him and in the dark he could see her little, white face. The covering over her head fell back and she exclaimed: "Heavens!" and impulsively put her hands out over his. "Do you really mean what you say?"

"Yes," he nodded surprisedly. "What do you look like that for?"

Letty Lane arranged her scarf and then drew back from him and laughed.

"Oh, dear, dear, dear," she exclaimed, "and I... and I have been..."

She looked up at him swiftly as though she fancied she might detect some new quality in him which she had not observed before, but she saw only his clear, kind eyes, his charming smile and his beautiful, young ignorance, and said softly to him:

"No use to cry, little boy, if it's true! But that woman isn't half good enough for you—not half, and I guess you think it funny enough to hear me say so! What does the other boy from Montana say?"

"Don't know," Dan answered indifferently. "Marooned him; didn't tell him about it before he left. You see he doesn't understand England—doesn't like it."

A little dazed by the way each of the two women took the mention of the other, he asked timidly: "You don't like the Duchess of Breakwater, then?"

And she laughed again.

"Goodness gracious, I don't know her; actresses don't sit around with duchesses." Then abruptly, her beautiful eyes, under their curled dark lashes, full on him, she asked: "Do you like her?"

"You bet!" he said ardently. "Of course I do. I am crazy about her." Yet he realized, as he replied, that he didn't have any inclination to begin to talk about his fiancée.

They had reached the Carlton and the door of Letty Lane's motor was held open.

"Better get out," he urged, "and have something to eat."

And she, leaning a little way toward him, laughed.

"Crazy!" Your engagement will be broken off tomorrow." And she further said: "If I really thought it would, why I'd come like a shot."

As she leaned forward, her cloak slipping from her neck, revealing her throat above the dark collar of the simple dress she wore, he looked in her dove-gray eyes, and murmured: "Oh, say, do come along and risk it. I'm game, all right."

She hesitated, then bade him good night languidly, slipping back into her old attitude of indifference.

"I am going home to rest. Good night. I don't think the duchess would let you go, no matter what you did."

Dan, standing there at her motor door, this beautiful, well-known woman bantering him, leaning toward him, was conscious of her alone, all snowy and small and divine in her enveloping scarf, lost in the corner of her big car.

"I hate to have you go back alone to the Savoy. I really do. Please let me—"

But she shook her head. "Tell the man the Savoy," and as Dan, carrying out her instructions, closed the door, he said: "I don't like that empty vase in there. Would you be very good and put some flowers in it if they came?"

She wouldn't promise, and he went on:

"Will you put only my flowers in that vase always hereafter?"

Then, "Why, of course not, goose," she said shortly. "Will you please let me close the door and go home?"

Dan walked into the Carlton when her bright motor had slipped away, his evening coat long and black flying in his wings behind him, his hat on the back of his blond head, light of foot and step, a gay young figure among the late lingering crowd.

He went to his apartments and missed Ruggles in the lovely quiet of the sitting-room, but as the night before Ruggles had done, Dan in his bed-room window stood looking out at the mist and fog through which before his eyes the things he had lately seen passed and repassed, spectral-like, winking across the gloom. Finally, in spite of the fact that he was an engaged man with the responsibilities of marriage before him, he could think of but one thing to take with him when he finally turned to sleep.

The face of the woman he was engaged to marry eluded him, but the face under the white hood of Letty Lane was in his dreams, and in his troubled visions he saw her shining, dovetail eyes.

WAS SHOWN WHAT TO BLOW UP

Man Pointed Out Power House to McManigal.

AFTER OTHER DYNAMITERS

Many Others Implicated Before Grand Jury in Explosions All Over the Country.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 17.—"When you arrive in Omaha to blow up the power house you will be met by somebody who will show you where it is."

That statement, said by Orrie McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, to have been made to him by John J. McNamara, the convicted secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, was inquired into at the federal grand jury's investigation of the dynamite conspiracy.

McManigal said, in response to the instructions from McNamara, he went to Omaha in July, 1910, to blow up the power plant of an "open shop" contractor and was met by a man whose name he gave. McManigal said the man told him he had communicated with McNamara about the job to be blown up, that the man himself could not do it because he was not experienced in explosives.

The evidence was in line with that being gathered by the government to ascertain who, if any one besides those already known, were implicated in the hundred or more explosions over the country in the last five years.

It was about the time of the Omaha "job," according to McManigal, that McNamara said to him:

"I am going to get six or eight good fellows and station them about the country, so that explosions will take place in different cities all in one night and they won't know who is doing it."

Three explosions in Wisconsin were also investigated. Two men from Portage, Wis., said to be relatives of McManigal, were examined in connection with the dynamiter's transportation of explosives from Chicago to Wisconsin. The explosions were at Green Bay, Nov. 21, 1909; Superior, Aug. 2, 1910, and Milwaukee, March 16, 1911.

On his way to the Milwaukee job, which resulted in damage to a bridge being unloaded and a steamship, McManigal says he carried four quarts of nitroglycerin in a suitcase from Chicago and found six quarts awaiting him in Milwaukee.

As it required only four quarts to destroy the property he left the remainder in Milwaukee. In whose custody he left it and how some of the explosive happened to be there awaiting him are supposed to be some of the points inquired into by the grand jury.

McManigal is to be kept continuously before the grand jury for the next three days, describing orally and more in detail than was given in his written confession his movements from the time he was induced to go into the dynamiting business at Detroit, in June, 1907, down to his arrest last April.

The nineteen days' sessions so far have disposed of 200 witnesses. More than 100 persons still are to testify.

TO TALK TRADE PEACE

Civic Federation Plans For Meeting at Washington, Jan. 17.—"Industrial Peace and Progress" will be the general subject discussed at the annual convention of the National Civic Federation here on March 5, 6 and 7. On the first day Cardinal Gibbons will preside, and President Taft will make the opening address.

Among the more important matters to come up for special discussion will be the practical operation of the trade agreements between the railway systems of this country and the brotherhoods of trainmen, engineers and others, the three year contract between the National Association of Newspaper Publishers and the international organizations of printers, pressmen and stereotypers, and the contracts in many trades outside of these where large numbers of people are employed will be discussed during the meetings.

Vardaman Wins Toga.
Jackson, Miss., Jan. 17.—Balloting separately, the two houses of the Mississippi legislature named James K. Vardaman to succeed United States Senator Leroy Percy, whose term expires in March, 1913. In joint session the election will be ratified. Vardaman defeated Mr. Percy in last summer's primaries.

Kills Man; Pleads Self-Defense.
Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 17.—John T. Bartonstein, manager of the whole sale department of a local coal company, was shot and killed by W. T. Avery, formerly a real estate dealer. The shooting occurred at Avery's home. Avery, in jail, declined to give the cause of the quarrel, but asserted he fired in self-defense.

Rush to Stake Gold Claims.
Minotons, Minn., Jan. 17.—As a result of the finding of nuggets of gold in numerous fowls killed on the Elliott farm, four miles from here, shops and stores have been closed, while their keepers hastened to the place to stake claims. More than fifty claims have been taken up and scores are hastening to the place.
